SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1953 SPRING

heralded its arrival several weeks five p. m., confirmation lecture. ago with displays of gay gowns, season of buds and blossoms made its official entry to don new attire. But the few who clung to winter raiment now have no alamong the gentler sex would risk their reputations as welldressed individuals by wearing winter garments after March 21.

spring is here and home gardeners are busy preparing for the planting they hope will yield a bumper crop. The housewife also knows it is here as her thoughts turn, reticently perhaps, to coming days when that scraping. scrubbing job known as spring housecleaning must be tackled.

And girls whose thoughts are directed toward the month of brides and roses know that the season for collecting articles for a trousseau is at hand and that there is no time to lose.

Yes, spring is here. The calendar says so, stylemakers say so and all nature is preparing for the ual revivification for and flowers and plants.

WILSON'S SPRING PRUNING

The firm hand of a management expert is evident in the order issued by Defense Secretary Wilson to the civilian heads of the three branches of the armed forces. The order said simply that the number of civilians on the defense payrolls must be reduced by 39,346 by the end of May. No ifs, ands or buts.

The three services now employ 1,290,000 civilians. Therefore the cut will amount to less than three per cent, or approximately the number that would normally resign in a two-and-a-half-month period.

The order means that no civilians are to be hired to take the place of those who would normally be quitting government jobs for one reason or another. Nor are the services permitted to shift uniformed personnel around to cover the gaps left by civilian departures. All of which will acquaint supervisory personnel with an old maxim that is standard in industry; You never know how much you can get along without until you have to.

Apparently spring pruning is in vogue in Washington. A start is at least being made. The purpose, of course, is to get more efficiency out of the defense dollar. The nation will be watching with interest as the branches and twigs fall.

If Hawaii is admitted as a state, it will be necessary to redesign the flag to accommodate 49 stars, unless voters in present states are permitted to vote on the proposition of reverting to territorial status, in which event it might be necessary to reduce the number of stars to 20 or 30.
